1st Infantry Division Units

Where they are, What they're doing.

1st Infantry Division Headquarters returned from Germany in August 2006 and moved into a new headquarters building November 2007, located on 1st Division Road. Since their return, Headquarters has been involved in training brigades and transition teams for Iraq and Afghanistan.

1st Brigade, 1st Infantry Division assumed the mission of training Military Transition Teams (MiTT) in October 2006. 1st Brigade is responsible for training other externally sourced MiTTs comprised of Army, Navy and Air Force personnel. Training ranges from lessons in Afghan and Iraqi culture and language to convoy operations and weapons systems. As of July 2008, 1st Brigade has trained more than 9,000 combat advisors.

2nd Brigade, Heavy Brigade Combat Team just deployed to Iraq in Fall 2008 for a 12-month rotation.

3rd Brigade, Infantry Brigade Combat Team is currently located in Fort Hood, Texas, and is deployed to Afghanistan. When the brigade returns, it will be relocated to Fort Knox, Ky.

4th Infantry Brigade Combat Team became a newly modularized brigade in January 2006. The Dragon Brigade just returned from a deployment to Iraq in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom. In February 2007, the Brigade became the second "surge" brigade to deploy on a 15-month tour. The brigade is scheduled to deploy again in Summer 2009.

Combat Aviation Brigade has 2,300 soldiers assigned to Fort Riley. The brigade is currently deployed to Iraq for 15 months and is expected to return December 2008.

1st Sustainment Brigade is at full strength of approximately 350 soldiers and is currently deployed to Iraq for a 15-month tour. They are expected to return in December 2008.
